Overview

Caroline Tubbs is a trial lawyer whose state and federal civil litigation practice encompasses complex business and commercial disputes, with a particular focus on matters affecting the energy industry, including royalty and late interest payment cases and class actions and lawsuits alleging breach of contract, lease cancellation, pollution, environmental and surface damages, nuisance and trespass, negligence, quiet title, and personal injury.

Caroline graduated magna cum laude with her bachelor's degree in communications and political science from Ouachita Baptist University in 2023 and summa cum laude with her Juris Doctor from the Oklahoma City University School of Law in 2026, where she was named the school's Outstanding Graduate and inducted into the Order of the Barristers. While in law school, she competed on the ABA National Appellate Advocacy Team, worked as an academic fellow for contract law and constitutional law, served as a staff editor on the Oklahoma City University Law Review, externed for the Honorable Timothy D. DeGiusti, Chief Judge of the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Oklahoma, and earned five CALI Awards for academic achievement.

Prior to attending law school, the Arkansas native gained valuable experience working as an intern for a U.S. senator, a U.S. congressman, the Office of Arkansas Governor Asa Hutchinson, and the Clark County Prosecuting Attorney's Office. She also worked as an administrative clerk for a boutique litigation firm for two summers while pursuing her undergraduate degree.
